DRY WORLD IS SEEN ON WAY BY MISS GORDON, W.C.T.U. HEAD

(Miss Anna Adams Gordon of Evanston, Ill., has just been elected president of the international body of the W. C. T. at that organization's meeting in Philadelphia.)

By ANNA ADAMS GORDON,
President World's Women's Christian Temperance Union.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—For 40 years the Women's Christian Temperance Union has been working for prohibition in forty nations.

An international educational program has been conducted in practically every civilized part of the globe Thousands of workers speaking many languages have been carrying forward the work.

All over the world we have been imparting to peoples of all the races the fundamental knowledge of the effect of alcohol on the human system

Discouraged and Encouraged.

Difficulties and obstacles of course have beset these W. C. T. U. workers but they have been encouraged and cheered on by two facts:

ONE—They always have known they were a part of a great organization, that they were all banded together for one purpose, and could count on the support and cooperation of their fellow workers everywhere.

TWO—Almost from the beginning we achieved some results; and with the passing years and the extending of our efforts into newer and larger territories we have seen the work going successfully forward.

In recent years great strides toward world wide prohibition have been made. With these advancements many reinforcements have joined our ranks. Many rational, thinking men and women the world over who were not originally in sympathy with prohibition have come to see the sound scientific basis of our program and the necessity of our objective and have joined with us and are now lending their best efforts to our work.

To Continue Program.

We shall carry on our program along practically the same lines we have followed for forty years, and we are confident of a successful termination of our long-sought objective of world-wide prohibition.

The position of the W. C. T. U. in the matter of cigarettes and tobacco is exactly what it always has been. We do not put tobacco and cigarettes side by side with alcoholic beverages Our national program on the subject of tobacco is an educational one, outlined and carried forward in the interest of the health of boys and girls everywhere.

It is based on established scientific facts that prove beyond a question the injurious effects of narcotics on the physical and nervous system.

We have worked largely with the school and other educational officials and authorities and almost without exception they have shown the keenest interest and readiest disposition to cooperate with us.

ANNA ADAMS GORDON.

La Follette Says Last Election Was Mandate From People Not To Be Ignored.

CHILDRENS BOOK PROGRAM GIVEN

The Children's Book Week program held at the library yesterday afternoon, was well attended and great'y enjoyed. Mrs. J. T. Alderson, who presided at the meeting, gave an interesting introductory address, explaining the object of this Children's Week which she said was primarily to get better children's books in the homes and teach the children an early appreciation of good literature. She said that the library hoped to make this week an annual affair.

A special feature of the program was the performance of Miss Elizabeth Ellis' little pupils The little girls sang "Pretty Little Bluebird," the boys, 'Master Frog," and the two groups together sang a Christmas Song. Then followed acharming tableau in which Buddy Buster and Dorothy Smith capably filled the parts of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb.

Supt. J. W. Bradner gave a short talk on children's reading emphasizing its importance. "No estimate can be made of the relative effect of good and bad reading on the child," he said. "Parents should realize the importance of plenty of good books for their children in the homes" He also said that tests had shown that a rapid reader could better reproduce what he read than a slow reader, and for this reason the child sould have lots of practice in reading. "It is a mistake, too," he concluded, "to think that every book should teach a moral. The child should learn to appreciate a good book for its intrinsic value alone."

Mrs. Arnold spoke a few words on children's use of the library, urging them to be frequent visitors there, but asking them to do their reading at home and not in the school room.

As a last number the prize essay n "My Favorite Book and Why" was announced as written by Graham Short of the eighth grade and he was presented with the prize, "The Ransom of Red Chief," by O. Henry. The essay is reproduced on the editorial page of this issue. The other prize winner will be announced later.

COMMUNTIY MEET HELD LAST NIGHT AT SPEEDWELL

Cooperation in Marketing Farm Produce Is Discussed—Prof. F. C. Grannis of L. M. U., and T. R. Hill Speak.

TWENTY PERSONS FROM MIDDLESBORO ATTEND

A community meeting in the interest of cooperative produce growers' association was held at Powell's Valley High School last night, a meeting which will undoubtedly be the forerunner of many others, outgrowths of the Middlesboro Harvest Festival. This meeting was well-attended by the farmers of that section of Powell's Valley and by representatives of L. M. U. and Middlesboro. O. B. Miller, principal of the school, presided at the meeting.

Prof F. C. Grannis, head of the agricultural department of L. M. U., was the first speaker and he talked on the practical work given at the university especially in connection with the Smith-Hughes department "The purpose of this course," he continued, "is to prepare the student for farm life by eliminating the study of everything he does not need and emphasizing the things he doe need." He urged the establishment of this course at Powell's Valley High School, showing that, at a small additional cost, a great benefit might be derived

Prof. Grannis outlined the work that his students were doing, spraying fruit trees to augment their production, grafting, dairying, which he believes should be one of the Valley's most important industries, poultry culling, studying cattle, hogs and horses by personal inspection of nearby farms, selecting seed corn, and doing farm shop work.

L. M. U. Boys Talk.

Following this the professor put some of his students through a drill in tying knots and then two of his boys gave short talks. Roy Hendrix of Alabama talked on "The Value of Farm Shop Work," and Vernon Wall of North Carolina on "Cooperation." The first boy gave some good points on the efficiency of the farm shop work The other emphasized the value of cooperation, especially among the farmers in marketing farm produce and livestock.

T. R. Hill of Middlesboro was the last speaker and his subject also was "Cooperation." He first urged the farmers to take up and encourage the modern methods presented by L. M. U. "The farmers may think that they have got along well enough in the old way," he said, "but they will find some day that they would have got lots farther if they had practiced these new methods"

He went on to tell the unlimited possibilities if the farmers would lose the feeling of petty strife and competion and pull together for the biggest possible good of the community. "Lose yourselves in the community interest," he urged, "and build things that will last after you are gone. The man who is going through life without making things better is losing the biggest chance a man can have."

Stressing the possibilities of cooperative marketing, Mr. Hill pointed to the progress the tobacco growers had made by organizing to defeat the tobacco trust. "You can get top prices for your crops, too," he said, "and sell all you grow, if you organize to market cooperatively."

Local Businesses Represented.

A number of Middlesboro men drove over to attend the meeting and to assure the people there of their interes in this new work. Those who went were: W. C. Stair of the Kentucky Utilities Co., Hugh Allen of the Allen Lumber Co., F. R. Whalin of the Bell County Lumber Co., Lloyd Smith and R. K. Judy of the National Bank of Middlesborough, W. E. Frazer of the Citizens Bank and Trust Co., A. M. Kinnaird, Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. agent, L. D. Hill of Hill's Cash Store, W. S. Anderson of Middlesboro Hardware Co., W. P. Wives and Ladies of Potentate Overcome by Grief at Unceremonious Departure.

By Associated Press

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 18.—The sultan's wives and ladies of the harem are overwhelmed with grief and dismay over the flight of the sultan. They did not know he was going. The sultan's youngest wife, who is the 22-year-old daughter of his gardener, became hysterical when the fact of the sultan's flight was confirmed and seven eunuchs who have been his personal bodyguard for five years gave themselves up in despair, fearing the sultan has been kidnaped by Kemalists. Other eunuchs and ladies of the harem, numbering 300, wept bitterly and soon the whole place was in a state of commotion.

SOUTHERN COAL SHORTAGE SERIOUS

Report Says Car Priority Order May Be Required To Replenish Stocks.

Priority orders may be necessary to insure to the South a sufficient supply o coal for household use to meet the winter's requirements.

At the office of the Federal Fuel Distributor it was stated that every effort would be made to meet the serious shortage of domestic fuel in the South without resort to priority orders. Northern connections were ordered to day to deliver 4,150 hopper-bottom coal cars to the Louisville and Nashville railroad as the first step to meet the situation.

It has been noted that the householders have not been ordering coal in the South, because of the mild weather and hope for a decline in price. The retailers' stocks are low. A few days of cold weather and the situation might become serious, for supplies cannot be had instanter.

While the principal cause for the unusual sortage of domestic coal in the South is due to the car shortage several other circumstances have had a bearing on the situation. For one thing, the coal mines in Alabama are operated on an open shop basis. They continued to produce throughout the coal strike, which lasted from July 1 to September 1. During the early months of the strike, at least, there was a surplus of coal in Alabama. At that time federal officials urged wholesalers and retailers in the South to purchase this coal.

In recent weeks the demand for coal for industrial use has slumped decidedly. The Alabama operators reached a point where they were unable to dispose of their slack coal, which has reulted in a corresponding reduction in the amount of domestic sizes produced.

The shortage of domestic coal is general throughout the South. It is recognized that the situation is serious, but it is believed that it can be met successfully without priority orders if there is full co-operation among the various branches of the coal trade, the transportation agencies and the consumers.

It is believed that the Instertate Commerce Commission will be disinclined to grant a request for priority even if the fuel distributors should request it. One of the causes of car shortage at the mines has been due to the large use of open top cars for the transportation of road materials. —The Journal and Tribune.

SEE ACTIVE WINTER BUILDING PROGRAM

"American Contractor" Survey Shows Contemplated Work More Than Usual.

By Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 16.—More than the usual amount of winter activity in building with residential work taking a prominent part, is indicated in a survey of activities made by The American Contractor, in twenty-seven states forming the main northeartern part of the United States.

Valuation of the 2141 contracts awarded for the week ending October 28, reached a total of $64,348,000 and was but slightly lower than the weekly average for the first nine months of this record breaking year, says the publication.

"The volume of contracts awarded during the last two weeks of October which are normally dull, shows that there is expectation of less let-up than usual during the winter period," the paper states. "Thre are incontrovertible facts which show that building activity is in no danger of a slump for months to come.

"Contemplated work reported for the week ending October 28 totaled $100,662,900. For the corresponding week of 1921, this total was only $86,422,000 and the valuation of contracts awarded was only $51,718,600. Yet the fall of 1921 was considered a good opener for the spring season of 1922.

"Of the contemplated work for that week. $46,491,000 is for residential building as against $12,331,00 for business building and $7,025,000 for industrial building. While the demand for residence building has not diminished and will not diminish for some time, there is little business and industrial building going on and a period of business expansion will add these projects to the field. In addition there is much educational and governmental building in abeyance which must be done soon.

"Skilled labor will be scarce next year as it is now. Indications are that no reductions will be made in wages of common labor which is all absorbed. Material men are producing at increased costs. The demand for labor and materials in the spring will equal the supply."

CLEMENCEAU GIVEN ROYAL WELCOME IN NEW YORK TODAY

Thousands Cheer Him at Manhattan —Tiger Explains Visit Is Unofficial One To Vindicate His Country.

TO BE ENTERTAINED IN NEW YORK BY CHARLES D. GIBSON

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Georges Clemenceau has again set foot on American soil. Today the Tiger of France who hopes to cement friendly relations between France and America by this unofficial visit, found a thousand persons waiting for him on the tip of Manhattan Island. There were cheers when he stepped ashore and more cheers when he was escorted up Broadway for an official visit to the city hall Girls in office windows blew kisses to him and The Tiger responded by waving a red rose in courtly manner.

French Ambassador Jesserand welcomed Clemenceau to the United States. Robert Woods Bliss, assistant secretary of state, invited him to Washington to see President Harding. He accepted, expressing delight. At the city hall he was welcomed by Acting Mayor Murray Hulbert. George W. Wickersham introduced The Tiger as one of the greatest citizens of the world.

In a brief speech The Tiger explained he came on no mission, but that when he heard his country criticised for being militaristic he decided to come. He denied the charge, but said that his country had been invaded twice in his lifetime, and "did not want to see a third invasion before my death." From the city hall Clemenceau motored to the home of Charles Dana Gibson where he will be guest while here.

DIPLOMAT COLLEGE FOR KENTUCKY

State Gets First Class Chance At Offer Put Out In Dr. Patterson's Will As Memorial To Son.

A THOUGHT

Be content with such things as ye have.—Hebrews 13:5.

It is thought by some persons that if the common people rule the world there will be millennial conditions. But the trouble is the common people have been ruling the world. Now the world is in sore need of uncommon people.—Elmer Willis Serl.

PRACTICAL FARM TRAINING AT L. M. U.

The work that Lincoln Memorial University is doing, especially through the Smith-Hughes department, was brought out forcibly last night by the demonstrations of the class from there at Powell's Valley High School. Quick, eager, free from self-consciousness, these boys give promise of a wide-awake near future for the rural communities to which they will return when they leave school.

"Smith-Hughes instruction prepares the students for farm life by eliminating instruction he doesn't need for practical farming and emphasizing the things he does need," Prof. F. C. Granbis said in explaining this work, and herein seems to lie the secret of the course's success. These boys are interested in every phase of this work, and best of all, they are interested because they intend to go right back to the farm from which they came and put these progressive ideas into practice.

There are no better people in the world than the farmers of Tennessee and Virginia from whom most of the L. M. U. students come. Many of the best and most progressive citizens of our city are from these districts. For this reason, and because we realize their friendly spirit, we know that they will welcome the new ideas that their boys bring back from school. For years they have gone about their work in the same primitive manner and through these years, for most of them, living has been a hard struggle. Their boys are learning farm methods which are more efficient, more up-to-date and more conducive to prosperity. In another generation the old regime will have passed and the new farmers, by applying their newly learned tactics of scientific farming, will have made their districts as modern and improved as the most progressive farms of the country.

MR. CRISSINGER'S BANK STATEMENT.

Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger reports the total resources of all the National banks on September 15, this year, at $20,926,099,000 an increase of $220,089,000 since June, this year, and an increase of $1,206,919,000 since September, 1921. The big increase was in the deposits.

The statements show distinctly the great improvement of business in comparison with a year ago, and, at the same time, they indicate clearly and unquestionably that liquidation has been completed fully and both commercial concerns and financial institutions have built up immense cash reserves. They signify that business is being carried on now on a cash basis, and they give a fair idea of the elasticity which will enable business to expand a great deal.

Prosperity is general throughout the United States and immediate prospects are excellent. The economic reaction was severe, but it has left the nation financially stronger than ever.

THE OPEN FORUM

Laws' Delays Versus New Roads.

Bell county has voted bonds for road building with hardly any opposition being expressed at the election. If this work is to be done, there are several reasons why it should be done promptly.

It is proverbial that public officials have no idea of the value of time, and as there are several steps to be taken before these bonds can be issued and contracts let for the actual work to begin, we offer these reasons for avoiding delay.

One reason is the pressing need for the finished roads. Coal miners here at Middlesboro, to a great extent, own automobiles, and many more will buy them when the time comes that they can go to work over good roads.

The trains to the mines are overcrowded every day by working people who want to live in Middlesboro for the purpose of educating their children, and work at the mines. Good roads up Stony Fork will increase the population of Middlesboro as much as a thousand people, and will increase the labor supply for our mines and will increase the amount of business done at this city. The work on this particular road can be done in winter as well as in the summer, and there are a great many unemployed who need this work, and need it right away.

The mines are running only two and three days a week but are overcrowded with help. Why will men go to places that give them only two days work a week except that there is no other employment for them?

The railroads are overburdened with freight and do not handle short-distance merchandise to advantage. Good roads will provide for this to be done by auto trucks and provide additional work in our community, while railroads will have more equipment to devote to hauling coal.

If our county authorities do not act different from the way that courts generaly do, it wil be this winter a year instead of the present winter that this work gets started.

We understand that prompt action in this construction to a great extent lies in the power of our County Judge Bingham, who should know that the eyes of the public are upon him to see if the hopes of the people for efficiency are to be realized, or whether we are to be disappointed by dilatory methods and unnecessary delays.

PRIZE LIBRARY ESSAY

The following is the essay of Graham Short, eighth grade, which won the first prize in the library essay contest on "My Favorite Book and Why":

The book I like best is Kazan, a dog story, written by James Oliver Curwood. I like it because it is a story of the big out doors, and it is written in one of the most beautiful parts of the world.

It does not weary you about any plot but is the tale told of the events in the life of a beautiful dog. It describes fights among dogs, men and wolves, it tells about great blizzards and storms and famines and epidemics of the deadly smallpox. The way animals live, love and hate is told like the passions of men and women.

It brings you closer to the life of a quaint, simple people, and makes you feel as if you, yourself, were out under the stars and could hear the gathering howl of the wolf packs.

Kazan is the hero of the story, a big wolf dog, who leads the sledge dogs. He is great and fierce but is overcome by a woman's love, and the cooing of a little baby.

He is mated to a pure blooded wolf who is blind in both eyes. Kazan is torn between love for the woman and love of the wild, and how he decides and the things that happen in his and his mate's life make up this story which is both beautiful and thrilling. —Graham Short.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM.

FANTASIES

By Berton Braley

I still believe in Santa Claus,
I still believe in fairies;
I hold my faith in them because,
Unless illusion tarries,
There is no fun in life at all,
No use in work or strife at all,
No sense in any scheming.
There isn't any doubt of it,
We might as well be out of it,
If robbed of all our dreaming.

I still believe a pot of gold
Is at the rainbow's ending;
Which, by adventure brave and bold,
I may in time be spending.
And though the cynics jeer at me,
And all the pedants sneer at me
And all the facts confound me
The gold is there, I'm sure of it,
And evermore the lure of it,
Will bind as it has bound me!

Oh, bleak indeed is life for those
Who have no rosy visions;
Who live within a world of prose,
Of facts and grim precisions,
The silly dreams I've kept from youth
Are nearer to the living truth
Than all their dull-eyed care is;
I laugh, and flout their dreary laws,
I still believe in Santa Claus,
I still believe in fairies!

Deep Water

BY ZOE BECKLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Married life, as far as JOHN BARRETT was concerned, had reached the breaking point. He could bear the tedium no longer and told his wife, ANITA that he inteded to live his life to the utmost. Nineteen years of marriage and two children made no difference. He left, going at once to MYRA DEAN, woman of the world, and asked her to take him. When she says that she is about to leave on a six months' trip to the Near East for newspaper work, he leaps to his feet and grasps Myra in his arms.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"When you come back! No — that won't do, Myra." Barrett held her arms in a grip that hurt. "Six months! Are you casually telling me to go home and wait for six months till you come back from the other end of the world and—"

"Now sit down, Johnny, and smoke. It may help you to understand things. Besides, you are hurting my arm. There, that is better. Tell me — is six months a long time to wait for me —me?"

"It is six months longer than I can endure life as it is," muttered Barrett glowering at his cigaret.

Myra paused, poised almost literally on tip-toe of decision which much depended on the outcome. Then she went to her half packed bag and began putting her work things in.

"You know, Johnny Barrett, I have always felt that you and I had swapped sexes psychologically. Woman is supposed to act illogically on temper and impulse. Man's the thinking animal—" she flashed a smile at him. "Yet here you are, a lusky, intelligent male, passionately proposing to me because, forsooth, you are tired of your good wife. Logiscal sequence! And here am I—"

She walked over to where he was grumping in his chair and laid a pretty hand on his shoulder.

"—here am I," she repeated with bantering tenderness, "very fond of illogical you, but very logically insisting that you have not sufficiently thought out the rash step you contemplate. To make matters sure, I am going away. It will give you time to cool off and to think—"

Barrett rose and threw his cigaret into the fire.

"I will think it out with you."

Myra shook her head, but her eyes were all softness and pity.

"My mind will be too full of warring Greeks and Turks."

He took her shoulders, tenderly this time, and made her look him squarely in the face.

"Myra, I thought of you as my wife before I even met Anita."

"And decided on Anita." Her smile had no vindictiveness.

"How was I to know what 19 years would teach me?"

"What do you know about it now?"

"This." He took up his hat and his coat deliberately. "That I am sailing on the Cedric too. A wild gwky on the Cedric too. And I will leave things behind me so there will be no need nor possibility of me ever coming back."

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

It was the same old broom.

LOST BROOM IS FOUND

Nancy and Nick looked and looked everywhere. They not only asked all the Mother Goose people up in the sky but all their fairy friends as well.

It was Mr. Sprinkle-Blow, the weatherman, who said something which made the Twins stop hunting and sent them hurrying to the little chocolate drop of a house on a high mountain where Mother Goose lived.

"I wouldn't wear out my Magic Shoes if I were you," advised Mr. Sprinkle-Blow. "Mother Goose doesn't need her old broom any more. This morning when I looked down from my house in Bluster-Gust Land, I saw a broom leaning up against her woodshed. She must have gotten a new one."

"Hello, kiddies!" called Mother Goose when she saw Nancy and Nick coming. "Tired hunting?"

"Oh, no," answered Nick. "Only we heard you had a new broom."

"Highty tighty!" she exclaimed. "New broom indeed! Who said so?"

Nick told her what Sprinkle-Blow said.

"Well, I declare! I'll have to look!" cried the good fairy lady in astonishment. "I didn't know a thing about it!"

So they all rushed out.

There was a broom, just as the Weatherman had said. But of a new one! It was the same old broom Mother Goose always used.

"It's been there all the time, I do believe," cried Mother Goose. "Yes, I remember now. I was cleaning up after the wood-chopper, and forgot to put it behind the door where I always keep it. Will you tell the Fairy Queen, my dears?"

The Twins hurried off to spread the good news.

Loquitur Arbor.

Where are they gone?
The cardinal and mocking bird
The oriole
That poised upon
My topmost branches to pour out my soul;
Full, full, and clear,
In melodies that heaven might have heard,
And lingered in its course to hear—
Where are they gone?

My leaves are fallen and my birds are fled—
Summer is dead.
Around my root they have burned the dry grass black,
And grey cloud gather at my head.
Will summer and the birds come back?
Where are they sped?
Will the burned grass grow green;
And—heard—unseen—
Among its stems the crickets spin their thread
Of slender song, like my birds overhead?
Is summer dead?

Summer is gone, and all the birds are flown;
The wind calls through my boughs alone;
No tilted wings are there;
No song is blown
Down golden sunlit ladders of the air.
And yet my branches are not wholly bare.
Hidden among them, lest
I should despair,
The birds have pledged me with
An empty nest.
An empty nest,
But the full pledge of the returning guests,
And of the returning summer, green and fair.

Summer is gone, the birds have fled;
But, with their nest built in my heart
I know but for winter they depart—
They are not dead.

Mary Lestlie Newton.

If You Are Well Bred

You know that it is not advisable for a young woman to ask a man to call upon her until she has met him several times and is quite sure that he wishes to avail himself of the privilege.

A woman never calls upon a man except in business, in which case she makes her stay brief and does not discuss social or domestic problems. If for any reason, a woman is obliged to make a call upon a man at his home she is accompanied by an older woman.

Prominent Kentucky Women to Speak Here

Four of Kentucky's most prominent women, Mrs. Harold March, Mrs. Susan Hibbard, Mrs. E. L. Hutchinson of Lexington and Mrs. Samuel Henning of Louisville will be in Middlesboro the latter part of next week. They will speak to the women of Middlesboro at the Booneway Inn on some of the foremost things that are of vital interest to the American women today. One of the topics to be discussed will be "Good Citizenship." It is hoped that many will avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing these speakers. The date will be announced later.

Celebrate Sixth Anniversary Monday

The Ladies Bible class of the M. E. church, South, will celebrates their sixth anniversary at Kentenva Hall Monday afternoon. Invitations are being mailed out to members and friends this week. Tiny silk bags with draw strings are enclosed.

To look at us, you'd think that we,
The Ladies' Class, were grown-up quite
But that's all wrong, we're only six
Years old this month, and we invite
You down to our Kentenva Hall
On Monday next from three to five
To celebrate the Day with us,
But say, as sure as you're alive,
You're puzzled now just what to bring
By way of gift—may we suggest
A penny for each year you're old,
That's what would make us happiest.

Ladies' Bible Class, M. E. church, Kentenva Hall, Nov. 20, 1922.

WEARING WRONG WRAP

Today's incorrect fashion shows you an interesting, very stylish wrap, whose charm is quite lost on the type of woman wearing it. She is medium in stature, slightly inclined toward heaviness, and in this garment she gives the impression of a caricature. The coat is much too large in proportion to the skirt, and gives a painfully top heavy appearance.

How different the same individual looks in the coat of dark brown Tarquina cloth trimmed with rich beaver in which the waistline is not exaggerated, the lines are simple and the general effect is that of slimness and trimness.

All Parents Urged To Attend—Thanksgiving Program By Children Planned.

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association will be held at the school Monday evening at 7:30. Every parent is urged to attend every one of these meetings, as it is only by the hearty cooperation of many fathers and mothers with the teachers that desired results may be obtained.

Those who have not yet done so are requested to bring the money subscribed for these instruments and those who are in arrears for dues are urged to hand them to the treasurer, Miss Lillian Weinstein. There are a number of projects of the association waiting to be carried out when the dues are all in the treasury.

One of the splendid programs planned by the committee for the year will be given on Monday next. Several of Kentucky's most prominent educators have been invited to speak at the Parent-Teachers' meetings through the year.

The program Monday night follows; Song, "Pilgrim Maidens," and concert recitation, "Thanksgiving Day," second grade, Miss Foley's room; Thanksgiving song and "The Pilgrims and Their First Thanksgiving," second grade, Miss Herndon's room; address, "The Duty of Parents to the Child," Mrs. D. ## REASON FOR RED BIRD SCHOOL

"Why did you build your school on the Red Bird?" a number of friends have asked. "The location is so isolated and there being no roads so difficult to reach," said they, "that it would seem that you could have found an easier place in which to locate a school."

It is true that the Red Bird community is isolated, and that it takes a whole day of hard driving to reach it with a load of goods. And it is true that there are places in the mountains where it would have been easier to locate a school. But when we looked for a place in which to locate a school we looked for a place that was isolated and a place which because of difficulties had always been neglected by others. The conveniences of the location were a minor consideration. An opportunity to give some advantages to under privileged boys and girls was what we sought, and that opportunity the Red Bird affords in abundant measure. That we found the right location a few incidents will serve to prove.

About One Boy.

We have one boy who has now been with us nearly five months. When he came everyone who knew him said that he would not stay over a month for that was the longest he ever stayed at any place or at anything. And his reputation otherwise was not at all in his favor. A brother and an uncle of this boy had both been killed within a year under circumstances that were avoidable except for their condition at the time of their deaths. Altogether our boy was not a very hopeful prospect. We were successful, however, in finding right at the start the chord in his life that responded to our appeal to useful manhood and worthwhile citizenship. He has settled down to work with a determination to be a man. He goes to his school work like a race horse. We already promoted him from eighth grade to Freshman High School and though he was two months behind the class when he started he is already in the lead and showing his classmates the way. About the campus he performs cheerfully and thoroughly every task assigned to him. And if he gets past the present session of court without being sentenced for violations committed nearly a year ago we will be able in a few years to hand over to Bell county a young citizen who will assume his share of responsibility to develop the worthwhile things in the county and state. This boy is a representative type of a large number of boys and young men back here in the mountains. And these boys are one of the reasons for our being here.

Expected Whipping.

We have another boy, who until a year ago was the sorrow of his parents and the aggravation of every teacher. There was no trick of deviltry at which he was not a past master. He expected from one to three thrashings a day and seemed to increase in meaness with the severest of the punishments. The boy looked like a future case for the House of Corrections. But he has one very tender spot. Our teachers found it and in five months he has had to be disciplined but once. He presented to him the challenge of leading his class for we knew he could do it. He accepted the challenge and while his classmates refuse to give him the lead he is making the class go at a tremendous rate to keep even with him. If we can hold this boy steady for a few years and I am confident we can, we will have started a high-strung, young fellow in the right direction in life and nothing will ever stop him. He too, is a representative of a class of boys who possess some of the keenest wits in the world but they would become a heavy liability instead of an asset to any county if not properly developed. To turn these boys in the right direction is another reason for the location of our school on Red Bird.

An Ill Child.

Our nurse has been daily caring for a little fellow whose little legs are covered with running sores. This little fellow's home can hardly be called a home. It is an unsanitary windowless shack occupied by his father, his father's wife, a concubine and five brothers and sisters. He is the child of the unmarried woman. The place he calls home is a social sore to any community. To heal the sores on this little fellow's body, as well as the bodies of others like him and to help heal the moral and social ills, which in their effect are far worse is another reason for locating our school on Red Bird.

No Clothes.

A few mornings ago the wind was blowing a cutting chill down the valley. Workmen with their coats on could hardly keep warm at their work. That morning one of our little girls came to school crying bitterly. And she had good reasons to cry for she was barefooted, bare legged, bare headed and but for a little thin dress bare all over. But for just such cases generous friends in the north have been sending hundreds of garments and it did not take long to make that suffering little girl comfortable. And if there were no other reasons, relieving the suffering of little children, changing crying to laughter by adding a few warm clothes would be sufficient reason for locating on the Red Bird.

The cases cited above are some of the reasons why we are here. And for these same reasons we are asking the citizens of Middlesboro and Bell County for their interest and support.

—J. J. DeWall, Supt.

Less Meat If Kidneys Bother

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder troubles you.

No man or woman who eats too much meat can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Big meat eating may develop uric acid, which excites the kidneys; they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood; then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleepiness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus often ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

SAVED SICK SPELLS

Black-Draught Found Valuable by a Texas Farmer, Who Has Known Its Usefulness Over 30 Years.

Naples, Texas.—"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for years—I can safely say for more than 30 years," declares Mr. H. H. Cromer, a substantial, well-known farmer, residing out from here on Route 3.

"I am 43 years old, and when a small boy I had indigestion and was puny, and my folks gave me a liver regulator. Then Black-Draught was advertised and we heard of it.

"I began to take Black-Draught, and have used it, when needed, ever since. I use Black-Draught now in my home, and certainly recommend it for any liver trouble.

"I have given it a thorough trial, and after thirty years can say Black-Draught is my stand-by. It has saved me many sick spells."

Mr. Cromer writes that he is "never out of Black-Draught," and says several of his neighbors prefer it to any other liver medicine. "I always recommend Black-Draught to my friends," he adds.

This valuable, old, powdered liver medicine is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and has none of the bad effects so often observed from the use of calomel, or other powerful mineral drugs.

Be sure to get the genuine, Thedford's.

The Masquerader

"Not your political career, sir?"

There was a moment in which Chilcote hesitated, a moment in which the desire that had filled his mind for months rose to his lips and hung there and then the question, the incredulity in Blessington's face, chilled it and it fell back into silence.

"I—I didn't say that," he murmured. "You young men jump to conclusions, Blessington."

"Forgive me, sir, I never meant to imply retirement. Why, Rickshaw, Vale, Cressman, and the whole Wark crowd would be about your ears like flies if such a thing were even breathed—now more than ever since these Persian rumors. By the way, is there anything real in this border business? The St. George's came out rather strong last night."

Chilcote moved back to the table. His face was pale from his outburst and his fingers toyed restlessly with the open newspaper.

"I haven't seen the St. George's," he said hastily, "Lakely is always ready to shake the red rag where Russia is concerned; whether we are to enter the arena is another matter. But what about Craig, Burnage? I think you mentioned something of a contract."

"Oh, don't worry about that, sir," Blessington had caught the twitching at the corners of Chilcotes mouth, the nervous sharpness of his voice. "I can put Craig, Burnage off. If they have an answer by Thursday it will be time enough." He began to collect his papers, but Chilcote stopped him.

"Wait," he said, veering suddenly. "What. I'll see to it now. I will feel more myself when I've done something I will come with you to the study."

He walked hastily across the room; then with his hand on the door, he paused.

"You go first, Blessington," he said. "I will follow you in ten minutes. I must glance through the newspapers first."

Blessington looked uncertain. "You won't forget, sir?"

"Forget? Of course not."

Still doubtfully, Blessington left the room and closed the door.

Once alone, Chilcote walked slowly back to the table, drew up his chair, and sat down with his eyes on the white cloth, the paper lying unheeded beside him.

Time passed. A servant came into the room to remove the breakfast. Chilcote moved slightly when necessary, but otherwise retained his attitude. The servant, having finished his task, replenished the fire and left the room. Chilcote still sat on.

At last, feeling numbed, he rose and crossed to the fireplace. The clock on the mantel piece stared him in the face. He looked at it, started very slightly, then drew out his watch. The watch and clock corresponded. Each marked twelve o'clock. With a nervous motion he leaned forward and pressed the electric bell long and hard.

"Is Mr. Blessington in the study?" Chilcote asked.

"He was there, sir, five minutes back."

"All right! Tell him I have gone out — had to go out. Something important. You understand?"

"I understand, sir."

But before the words had been properly spoken Chilcote had passed the man and walked into the hall.

CHAPTER III.

Leaving his house, Chilcote walked forward quickly and aimlessly. With the sting of the outer air the recollection of last night's adventure came back upon him. Since the hour of his waking it had hung about with vague persistence, but now in the clear light of day it seemed to stand out with a fuller peculiarity.

The thing was preposterous, nevertheless it was genuine. He was wearing the overcoat he had worn the night before, and acting on impulse he thrust his hand into the pocket and drew out the stranger's card.

"Mr. John Loder!" He read the name over as he walked along, and it mechanically repeated itself in his brain—falling into measure with his steps. Who was John Loder? What was he? The questions tantalized him till his pace unconsciously increased. The thought that two men so absurdly alike could inhabit the same city and remain unknown to each other faced him as a problem; it tangled with his personal worries and aggravated him. There seemed to be almost a danger in such an extraordinary likeness. He began to regret his impetuosity in thrusting his card upon the man. Then again, how he had let himself go on the subject of Lexington! How narrowly he had escaped compromise! He turned out and cold at the recollection of what he had said and what might have said. Then for the first time he paused in his walk and looked about him.

On leaving Grosvenor Square he had turned westward, moving rapidly till the Marble Arch was reached; there, still oblivious to his surroundings, he had crossed the roadway to the Edgware Road, passing along it to the labyrinth of shabby streets that lie behind Paddington. Now as he glanced about him, he saw with some surprise how far he had come.

The damp remnants of the fog still hung about the housetops in a slimy veil; there were no glimpse of green to break the monotony of tone; all was quiet, dingy, neglected. But to Chilcote the shabbiness was restful, the subdued atmosphere a satisfaction. Among these sad houses, these passers-by, each filled with his own concerns, he experienced a sense of respite and relief. In the fashionable streets that bounded his own horizon if a man passed in his walk to work out an idea he instantly drew a crowd of inquisitive or contemptuous eyes; here, if a man halted for half an hour it was nobody's business but his own.

Enjoying this thought, he wandered on for close upon an hour, moving from one street to another with steps that were listless or rapid, as inclination prompted, then, still acting with vagrant aimlessness, he stopped in his wonderings and entered a small eating house.

The place was low-ceiled and dirty, the air hot and steaming with the smell of food, but Chilcote passed thru the door and moved to one of the tables with no expression of disgust, and with far less furtive watchfulness than he used in his own house. By a curious mental twist he felt greater freedom, larger opportunities in the drab surroundings such as these than in the broad issues and weighty responsibilities of his own life. Choosing a corner seat, he called for coffee; and there was a protecting shadow, and wrapped in cigarette smoke, he set about imagining himself some vagrant unit who had slipped its moorings and was blissfully adrift.

KENTUCTY TEAMS ON HOME FIELDS

"Bo" McMillin Brings Team to Play University of Louiville—Centre Meets Auburn.

Kentucky college teams, with two exceptions, play on their home fields *today. The Colonels of Centre Col*lege are at Birmingham, Ala., where they play Auburn, and Transylvania college is in Richmond, Ind., to meet Earlham.

Perhaps the game of the greatest interest in Kentucky is that at Lexington where the Wildcats of the University of Kentucky meet the Thin Red Line of Alabama. The Thin Red Line is a Misnomer, according to records made by the Alabamans during the present season, and the Wildcats have to put forth great efforts to win, in the opinion of Lexington followers of the game. Alabama trounced Pennsylvania in a recent contest and ties Sewanee early in the season. Kentucky defeated Sewanee and that is the only near dope available on the teams.

McMillin, famous All-American quarterback and star of the Centre College team for four years, brings his Centenary College eleven from Louisiana to Louisville for a game this afternoon with the University of Louisville. The Cardinals of Louisville have been gaining in strength during the last few weeks and the game is expected to be above the average. Bo has been successful in his first year's coaching, as the record of games show and the Southerners are expecting an easy time with the Cardinals.

The Crimsons of Transylvania have been crippled most of the season and the boys have yet to win their first victory. As the season is nearly over the coaches are devoting every minute to the squad in the hope of grabbing off the Earlham contest today.

Kentucky Wesleyan College is scheduled to meet St. Mary's College at Winchester this afternoon. The Methodists have been gaining in prestige throughout the season and backers of the team in Winchester claim that the boys will win from St. Mary's.

Auburn has been prepping for Centre for many weeks and followers of the game in the Alabama territory predict that the outcome of the contest will surprise the Colonels. The Colonels are not unprepared for the contest and they have been instructed to go in and win with some to spare.
